

It is the policy of Claflin University to protect the privacy of all students, including those enrolled in distance learning programs. The Claflin University's regional accreditation requires that it maintain a written privacy policy for students enrolled in distance education and correspondence education programs.

POLICIES AND PROCEDURES AT CLAFLIN UNIVERSITY

As published in the student handbook, Claflin University complies with the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) of 1974 to protect the privacy of all students, including distance learning students.¹

Claflin University issues all new students, including those enrolled in distance education programs, with a special student identification number and PIN number to enable them to access the Jenzabar Student Information System. Claflin University's student ID serves as an identifier for each student throughout his/her academic career. It is recommended that students do not disclose their unique student identification number or PIN number to anyone else.²

Students will need their student ID number and personal identification number (PIN) to access all college resources, including the Jenzabar SIS system. Jenzabar is Claflin University's web-based student information system used by all students, including those enrolled in distance education, for course registration, grades, textbook information, financial information, and personal information.³

- o Claflin University's distance learning students access their courses through a learning management system (LMS). A learning management system is a set of software tools that provide students with an online course environment. Claflin University uses Moodle as its official learning management system for online courses.
- o Faculty and students use their own login information and password to access the LMS.
- o enroll in.

- o In the secured environment of the LMS, instructors can post course materials, assignments, and exams, and students can participate in forum discussions, upload assignments, and take quizzes and exams. The learning management system protects the privacy of individual students' assignments and grades.

At Claflin University, students and faculty must respect diversity and communicate through the university's learning management system.

During the semester, students and faculty are advised not to delete any communication in the learning management system. Students and faculty must communicate via Claflin email and Moodle.⁴
